

John Cherry Bio

After an honorable discharge from the ARMY in 1993, John Cherry went to work for the family owned company. In 1995, he attended the OSHA 500 and later the OSHA 501 at the TEEEX OSHA Training Institute so that he could teach the construction and general industry courses to the in-house employees. With his background in the field and knowledge of safety, he has been able to grow his career by applying his knowledge to the workforce of how to still be productive while maintaining the highest safety for the workers.

With his desire to pursue his passion in safety, he left the family company and went to work for a Fortune 500 company where he was the Environmental Health and Safety Supervisor over the in-house and contractor employees on the BP project in Texas City. During his employment, he was able to assist the company in being profitable while still achieving the Gold Safety Award every year of the contract. Due to the sell of the refinery, the company's contract was canceled.

Mr. Cherry then became the Training Manager for the Houston training facility for another Fortune 500 corporation. He was in charge of the state of the art training facility and traveled all over the United States and Canada teaching many types of safety and rescue across a vast array of industries. After several years of employment, he and his wife, Jena, decided to start their own safety company. This allowed them to expand on more than safety and rescue training. John and Jena have assembled a team of safety professionals that possess the ability to provide many safety services needed in numerous industries including safety / rescue training, safety monitoring, policy and procedure reviews, technical writing, or safety consulting. They are committed to providing the quality and peace of mind that the industry demands.
